Eduardo Bonilla-Silva

The Diversity Blues at HWCUs:
On the Urgent Need to Reframe Our Diversity Agenda

Professor & Chair of the Sociology Department, Duke University

April 4th, 2016 • 3 - 5 pm
Student Center East
750 S. Halsted St., Room 302

RSVP to rvilor1@uic.edu or at irrpp.uic.edu

ABOUT THE SPEAKER

Professor Eduardo Bonilla-Silva’s path-breaking work focuses on addressing how, in a society that imagines itself as color-blind, racism remains a collective, structural phenomenon that is fundamentally about racial domination. Amongst his many awards and accolades, in 2011, Dr. Bonilla-Silva was given the Cox-Johnson-Frazier Award by the American Sociological Association in recognition of his “work in the intellectual traditions of the work of these three African American scholars.” Professor Bonilla-Silva received his Doctorate in Sociology from The University of Wisconsin-Madison.

THE BOWMAN LECTURE SERIES

This lecture was established to honor Phillip J. Bowman’s contributions to UIC during his tenure as Director of IRRPP and Professor of African American Studies. It features national scholars of race, ethnicity, and public policy who provide timely analysis of issues of critical importance to the field and to communities of color.